Radio Engineer Tom Voorhees is Ready to Serve: “building community radio to build a better world.”

Tom Voorhees is a retired radio engineer living in Washington State. There is a possibility that you have heard of him because he gets around: when a community radio station is in need of an engineer, Tom climbs into his rugged truck full of equipment, goes where the station is, and stays until everyone is up and running. It can take months. This is a godsend to most in community radio since his level of expertise usually comes at a high price and is hard to find.

Tom is one of the best in his field. “I was a communications engineer all my life, so when I retired, it was just the natural course to take,” said Tom.

Tom has dedicated his retired life to Pacifica Welcomes Oneonta’s WONY... How a New York State University’s 60-Year Commitment to a Student-Run Station Inspires Media Smart Citizens and Carries New Voices to its Local Community

This year, WONY 90.9 FM, the student-run radio station of the State University of New York at Oneonta (SUNY Oneonta), is marking its 60th Anniversary, an accomplishment attributable both to the university’s unfailing six-decades of support and to the enthusiasm that support engenders in each new class of student volunteers who assume full responsibility for running the station.

This milestone will be particularly sweet. The student staff is now operating at full force for the first time in two years, finally back on community radio. He designs and builds new community radio stations and does problem-solving needed for a multitude of different issues that come up at new stations. When Low-power stations (100 watts or less) upgrade to full-power capacity (more than 100 watts) Tom engineers that as well, and takes care of difficulties older stations have, as problems arise and technology changes. Much of the work means long hours at radio tower sites out in the elements... Read more on Tom Voorhees

Congratulations WXOX on Being Featured in Radio World
