Too Tall to Fall? Why Unions Matter.

Excerpt of Amir Khafagy speaking with WBAI's Robert Hennelly:

Immigrant labor is the backbone of American labor—at least in New York. It's the backbone we all depend on. And what I often try to convey in my reporting is that our immigration enforcement system and our immigration laws are inherently anti-labor laws, and people have to understand that when we criminalize announcements, to the musical culture of the Pine Barrens, the station ensures that the voices and stories of Galloway Township are heard loud and clear, fostering a strong sense of community and belonging.

The station manager is Al Juliano.

immigrants from being able to work in this country, what we're doing effectively is taking away their agency to defend themselves, to speak up for themselves, and we allow the exploitation of those workers.
